I have the honour to forward herewith a copy of the instructions issued by the Government of India, Home Department for the eliminations of unnecessary works during the war for the information of Government. In accordance with these instructions the periodical returns and reports rendered to Govt. by this office were examined. It is considered that the monthly or periodical statements of progresseive revenue furnished by this office to Government in the various Departments and to certain controlling officers under rule of 41 of financil Publications are not very essential. The figures of revnue if required can be taken down by clerks visiting this office for reconsciliation of expenditure. In other cases the figures will be furnished by this office if and when required by the officers concerned and not monthly. If Government agree the decision may kindly be communicated to this office and to the officers concerned for information and guidance.

2. The question regarding the printing and revision of codes and manuals of the Government of Bombay may be kindly considered in the light of the Government of India Home Department instructions. This work can be is suggested , be suspended except where much labour has already been expended and the further progress is not likely to prejudice the transactions of essential business. Accompaniment to Government Resolution, Finance Department,
No. 149/33.dated 4th May 1943.

Instruction for Elimination of unnecessary work during the war.

During the war it is the policy of Government to concentrate all energies on business contributing directly to the war effort and to prevent other kinds of business from occupying the time of their staffs more than is absolutely necessary.

2. This object can only be fulfilled if peace-time traditions, standards and mentality are boldly discarded and both the importance of work and the methods of conducting it are tested rigorously by the new outlook. In peace-time all the business of Government is regarded as equally important and,however trivial it may be is transacted, with the same meticulous care and attention to forms and procedure. In war no business whatever its intrinsic importance is entitled to claim the time of staff unless it is directly related to the war effort or, if not is concerned with the maintenance of the administration at the minimum safe level of efficiency or the preservation of conditions necessary for the stability and war resistance of the country or is enjoined by statute or is such that it cannot be postponed for the period of war. "Essential" work, so defined must have complete priority and non-essential work must be eliminated as far as possible even at the cost of efficiency. Similarly in the disposal of even of essential work quick and summary methods must be adopted and no unnecessary routine should be tolerated.

3. Each Department is so far as it has not already done so, must work out itself the application of these principles to its own business and see that they are fully adopted by the offices and central departments working under it. Certain rules can however be laid down for general guidance.

(2) Action on any existing case relation to an non-essential matter should be suspended for 6 months in the first instance unless at any time it becomes necessary for the disposal of an essential item of business. In deciding whether to suspend action the only test to be applied is whether the disposal of the case can wait till after the war without appreciably affecting the war effort. "Suspended " files should be sent to the record room.

(3) An exception to Rule(2) may be made in cases where so much labour has already been expended and progress made that further action is not likely to prejudice the transaction of essential business.

(4) Annual reports and work connected therwith, except the collection of statistics necessary for war administration, should be discontinued for the duration of the war.

(5)

(6) The circulation of information should be restricted to what is really useful and necessary. Provincial Governments or subordinate offices should not be addressed or consulted on any subjects merely as a matter of routine. All correspondence should be avoided unless it serves a deffnite and useful purpose. Copies of order or notification issued by any department should not be sent to other department or subordinate offices unless they are likely to be of use or interest to them.

(7) All communications should be worded as concisely as possible and even where the issue of an Express letter s not necessary the style and phraseology of an Express letter should be used. It should be noted that mere omission of definite and indeffnite articles does not make an express letter and may only make the sense of abscure. The object is to cultivate the utmost brevity and clarity of expression and to avoid all unnecessary discursive material.

(8) Office notes should be reduced to the minimum necessary, in order to ensure that a case reaches the officer competent to pass orders as early as possible.
